Russian signal analysts monitoring CIA-NSA-FBI

A new Main Intelligence Directorate (GRU) signals analysis (SIGNIT) report on the Obama regimes 18 June assassination of award winning American journalist Michael Hastings states that two Los Angeles police detectives involved in the investigation were themselves targeted for death just one week later.

According to this report, Russian signal analysts monitoring CIA-NSA-FBI encrypted electronic communication traffic in the Los Angeles area on 25 June observed a rapid spike of noise occurring between 0415-0445 Hrs (4:15-4:45AM PSDT) within a 12 block radius of the Hastings kill zone identified as North Highland Avenue and Melrose.

At 0437 Hrs (4:37 AM PSDT), this report continues, these same signal analysts reported an urgent rise in Los Angeles Police Department (LAPD) emergency radio traffic too.

A comparison of these two anomalous events, this report says, showed that the common link between them was the attempted assassination by ambush of two LAPD detectives driving into their Wilshire Division police station parking lot on Venice Boulevard, and which was less than 3 km from the Hastings kill zone.

In what LAPD Police Chief Charlie Beck called a blatant attempt to assassinate two of the people who protect this community, US media sources report that the two detectives were ambushed by as an yet unidentified assassin who approached their vehicle and unleashed a volley of shots slightly injuring both of the detectives before making his escape.

Chief Beck further stated that the gunman had to know that only police officers could enter the station through that gate and, therefore, that the people in the car were officers. About 200 officers, aided by helicopters and dogs, searched for the gunman, described generally as a black man in his 30s with a mustache and goatee, dressed in black and wearing a black cap.

This GRU report, however, states that these two detectives, who worked undercover for the LAPD burglary task force, were two of the first officers on the scene of the Hastings assassination the week prior and were obviously sent a message by Obama regime forces about the dangers of revealing what they knew.

According to Kimberly Dvorak, the only mainstream US investigative reporter reporting on Hastings assassination, the Obama regimes actions to cover up this high-profile murder have been successful as to date, she recently reported on San Diego s News 6 television report: Despite the LAPD's categorization of the Hasting fatal accident as a "no (evidence of) foul play, LAPD continues to ignore FOIA (CPRA in Calif.) requests made by San Diego 6 News for the police report, 9/11 call, autopsy, bomb squad and toxicology reports, or make the Mercedes available for inspection

Dvorak, in her News 6 report, further stated: Hastings friend and confidant SSgt. Joe Biggs disclosed a macabre twist in the award-winning journalist s death in a suspicious single-car accident. According to SSgt. Biggs, Michael Hastings body was returned to Vermont in an urn. This revelation provides another wrinkle in the Los Angeles Police Department s (LAPD) handling of a case they labeled no foul play only hours after the writer s death.

As to the unprecedented Obama regime action of cremating Hastings body without his family s permission either being sought or granted, the InfoWars News Service further reports:

A witness to the aftermath of the Michael Hastings accident on June 18 in Hancock Park in Los Angeles, California told Infowars Nightly News that the journalist s body was not badly charred as reported by the Los Angeles Times.

The LAPD and the Los Angeles County Coroner were trying their best to hide the body from the witness, who asked to remain anonymous, when it was pulled from the vehicle approximately three hours after the fire was extinguished, between 7:20 to 7:40 AM.

Righteous Indignation: Excuse Me While I Save the World!

Chapter 1 - From Little ACORNs Grow…

In June 2009, I didn’t know much about the Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now (ACORN). My attitude toward it was a generic conservative’s attitude: I knew that the lack of interest the mainstream media were showing in ACORN—especially with all the accusations leveled against it regarding its illegal voter fraud and ties with the Democratic Party—meant that there had to be something really, truly horrific about it. Whenever there’s smoke and the leftist media aren’t calling 911, that means there’s a huge fire raging out of control somewhere.

But beyond that, I had read only what everyone else had read every election cycle. I had read that ACORN acted as a kind of street army on behalf of Progressive interests, working to get Democrats registered for voting, working to get people on public assistance in the name of “social justice”—and I had read that because of its goals, ACORN was granted absolute protection under the cover of law and the media’s willful blindness. I knew that Barack Obama had put ACORN in charge of large swaths of the Census. My e-mail tip box was always filled with questions from readers asking, “What are we going to do about ACORN’s Census involvement?”

In 2010, the White House announced that for the 2010 Census, ACORN would recruit 1.4 million workers to go door-to-door counting every person in the country. This in spite of the fact that ACORN had been linked with severe voter fraud in states ranging from Washington to Pennsylvania.1 So people were worried. But ACORN was not my number one target by any stretch of the imagination. Then a young man named James O’Keefe walked into my office. He showed me a set of videos. My jaw dropped. After I watched the videos, there was silence. Then he turned to me and said, “We’re going to take down ACORN.” “No,” I replied. “We’re going to take down the media.”

> You’re looking at a passage from Righteous Indignation: Excuse Me While I Save the World!, written by Andrew Breitbart. It reflects a very specific political perspective, so it helps to understand it in context.
> What this passage is doing:
> - ➜ Narrative + opinion — Breitbart is describing his personal awareness of ACORN and how it evolved.
> - ➜ Framed through a partisan lens — it presents distrust of “mainstream media,” suspicion of progressive organizations, and a belief that something important was being ignored or covered up.
> About the claims in the passage:
> - ➜ ACORN and voter fraud — there were accusations and some isolated cases involving workers submitting faulty registrations. However, investigations generally found little evidence of widespread coordinated voter fraud by ACORN itself.
> - ➜ ACORN running the Census — this is not accurate. The U.S. Census is run by the United States Census Bureau. ACORN and similar groups sometimes did outreach or encouraged participation, but they did not control or run the Census.
> - ➜ Media “cover-up” framing — this is an interpretive opinion, not a verifiable fact.
> What Breitbart is trying to do rhetorically:
> - ➜ Appeal to suspicion (“if media aren’t covering it, it must be huge”).
> - ➜ Escalation of stakes (suggesting something “horrific” is hidden).
> - ➜ Personal turning point story (meeting James O’Keefe and deciding to act).
> Big picture:
> - ➜ The book is not meant to be neutral reporting.
> - ➜ It’s a political memoir / argument aimed at challenging mainstream narratives.
> - ➜ Like many political books, it blends facts, interpretations, and sometimes claims that are debated or contested.

A lifetime of work putting together a media and cultural system to affirm liberal narratives granted Obama a megacatapult to launch him in a way that no Republican or conservative could ever experience.

With the press, the unions, academia, and Hollywood behind Barack Obama, and the American people wanting to get the race monkey off their backs, the Obama presidency was a fait accompli—even if no one really knew anything about him.

My assessment didn’t make me popular where I live and raise my young family. Angelenos, especially of the West Los Angeles variety, especially those who work in the entertainment industry, don’t take too kindly to dissent—if you are a conservative, that is.

But I was right.

Sure, then-Senator Obama was good-looking—and sleek!—and possessed an undeniable gift for effortless, meaningless gab. But all I could think about was how uninteresting he sounded. With all his power and that massive artificial smile, I couldn’t envision wanting to have a beer with him. This was a power-hungry man who rose through the political ranks in corrupt Chicago and through the corrupt ranks of modern academia.

Without having held a real job, without a personal narrative of fulfilling the American Dream in the private sector—without having really done anything (achieving greatness only within the confines of political power doesn’t cut it)—this man was selling the government, not the individual, as the be-all and end-all. This man was preprogrammed, and I knew what he was selling. I knew I had to stop him. And the Internet was my battlefield of choice. I live on the battlefield.

Leftist assassins like Max Blumenthal, a one-trick hit man, have tried to label me and many of my allies as racists. I don’t let them get away with it. I don’t just call them out, I make sure that my righteous indignation registers on the Richter scale. I don’t pull out my record on civil rights or my black friends. I simply point out that what they're doing is pure Alinsky and that it has no basis in fact or reality, and that they're showing themselves to be racists in their own right by citing race every time they meet someone with whom they disagree.

While I was at the 2010 CPAC, I was confronted by Daryle Jenkins of the One People's Project based on my defense of James O'Keefe—he had been slandered online as a racist by Blumenthal because he had attended a conference at the Georgetown Law Center that included racist Jared Taylor, John Derbyshire of National Review (who ripped into Taylor for his racism during the forum), and African-American conservative Kevin Martin. At the event, O'Keefe sided with Derbyshire and Martin against Taylor.

Micheal Hastings and Victoria Windsor Investigating Obama origins reporting Micheal Hastings speaks, him quoted and speaking in the first person How ironic that they accuse Trump of Russia involvement when it was they who conspired with Russia to produce a polished liar and charlatan to unleash on an unsuspecting and naïve nation.

Irony has nothing to do with it. Brennan's carefully-laid plan was to use CIA-linked Columbia University to provide cover for Obama and pad a nice résumé for him.

In the meantime no one ever saw Obama at Columbia because Barry Soetoro was attending the Patrice Lumumba University in Moscow, named for Patrice Lumumba, the anti-colonialist who fought for Congo's independence from Belgium and was assassinated for his troubles.

He remains a martyr for his radical e?orts and revered in Russia as a communist sympathizer. The name of the university has since changed to "People's Friendship University of Moscow" to shed the radical connotation of Lumumba.

While Victoria [Windsor] and I were researching the Columbia discrepancies we got a lead that Barry had been in Moscow during the years 1981-83 at Lamumba. The reporting seems to continue in today https://www.thepostemail.com/2011/10/26/kenyan-newspaper-identifies-heltan-maganga-as-mombasa-hospital-administrator/

being BHO or Harrack Obama Jr.]

I was skeptical. Something this big surely would be splayed everywhere in our underground conservative online news outlets. I went to the PLU website and clicked on "Famous Alumni."

At the top of the list was Mahmood Abbas, President of the Palestinian Authority, or better-known as Chairman of the terrorist organization the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO). It was the second name on the list that rocked me to my core: Barry Soetoro, President of the United States. I swear on all things holy that it was there. I saw it and Victoria took a screenshot on her computer.

Immediately prior to his death, Hastings had published a strong critique of the Obama administration titled "Why Democrats Love to Spy on Americans," which exposed the party's hypocrisy regarding some of the civil liberty overreaches they had criticized under Bush but embraced under Obama. San Diego 6 News reported that Hastings had been investigating CIA Director John Brennan for an upcoming exposé prior to the crash [that killed Hastings wbo was being surrounded by the FBI and NSA.]
